Campus District 25 Year Ago

St. Vincent Charity Hospital and Health Center (Now St. Vincent Charity Medical Center) became the first hospital in the area to use the "New Jersey knee," a high-tech replacement joint developed by New Jersey doctors. About 30 orthopedic surgeons from Cleveland hospitals viewed the historic operation.

The New Jersey knee is the first knee prosthesis to allow for twisting motion and to be implanted without bone cement. Previously doctors hesitated to use artificial joints in arthritic patients in their 20s or 30s because the bone cement would eventually loosen. The New Jersey knee allowed for implant in younger people.
